THE UTAH STATE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THE HOUSE

The House of Representatives is composed of 75 men and women elected to two-year terms. House seats are up for election every two years in even-numbered election years. Each representative has a constituency of approximately 20,000 people and, like the Senate, the House is reapportioned periodically. Representatives' constituencies may include a county or portion of a county or one or more counties or a combination of these.

HOW LAWS ARE MADE

Proposed laws are introduced as bills in either chamber, are reviewed by fiscal analysts, legal counsel and a rules committee. The bill goes to a standing committee for study, possible public hearing, amendment or other action. The committee may table the bill or send it back to the originating chamber with a recommendation for action. If passed by that chamber, it is sent to the other chamber for similar procedure. If passed there, the bill goes back to the chambers for final review then to the Governor for signature or veto. If signed by the Governor, the bill becomes law in 60 days, or on the date proscribed. If vetoed, the Legislature may accept the veto, or attempt to override it.
